

Call for Papers for the C&M Working Papers series

Founded by Giovanni Sartori and friends, The Committee on Concepts and Methods (C&M) was the first research committee recognized by the International Political Science Association (IPSA) in 1970. It promotes conceptual and methodological discussion in political science and provides a forum of debate for adherents of all methodological schools, who otherwise tend to conduct their deliberations at separate tables.

C&M publishes two series of working papers that readers may consult and download for free at the C&M website (www.concepts-methods.org):

- Political Concepts (<http://www.concepts-methods.org/Page/View/24>) contains work of excellence on political concepts and political language. It seeks to include innovative contributions to concept analysis, language usage, concept operationalization, and measurement.
- Political Methodology (<http://www.concepts-methods.org/Page/View/23>) contains work of excellence on methods and methodology in the study of politics. It invites innovative work on fundamental questions of research design, the construction and evaluation of empirical evidence, theory building and theory testing.

Founded by Andreas Schedler in 2005, and edited by Cas Mudde since 2013, C&M has published close to one hundred working papers that have collectively been viewed and downloaded many thousands of times. Putting out the two working paper series is now perhaps the most visible and important activity of C&M.

The working paper series is open to excellent and original work from all sub-disciplines and methodological approaches. In particular, we are looking to increase the work in American Politics, Comparative Politics outside of Europe and Latin America, International Relations and Political Theory as well as research using interpretive and quantitative methods. All suitable submissions will be reviewed by two peers, who will be experts on the methodological aspect of the paper (after all, the innovation should be methodological rather than substantial). Importantly, they are asked to review the submission constructively, looking to improve rather than reject the paper, understanding that it is work-in-progress rather than the final product.

The WP series also aims to be(come) the place for high-quality original, conceptual and methodological work that is unlikely to be published (in that detail) in top journals. We are thinking in particular of extensive conceptual and methodological discussions in PhD dissertations, (reliability and validity) assessments of important datasets, and robustness tests of existing research using conceptual or methodological innovations. Unlike articles in most academic journals, WP papers can address what and how questions; e.g. what is the best conceptualization of party ideology? How can religiosity best be operationalized cross-regionally? What dataset provides the most reliable and valid results in studies of political mobilization? Further, WP paper that do address why questions do not necessarily have to provide empirically substantiated alternative explanations for the theories they critically assess. Most importantly, the critiques should predominantly be conceptual or methodological.

For more information on the C&M Working Papers series, and to download the published papers for free, please visit the website: <http://www.concepts-methods.org/WorkingPapers>.

If you are not sure whether your paper will fit the series, please feel free to contact the editor, Cas Mudde (mudde@uga.edu), to discuss your paper.

If you want to submit a manuscript to the C&M Working Paper series, send it to wp@concepts-methods.org.